LET'S GET STARTED

"The Bigger Picture" of CLOSING the Sale!

What are the key elements to becoming a better closer?

What makes it possible for someone to 'Close' first time in... and why are some sellers so much better at it than others? Will becoming a better 'closer' require me to be high pressure—Absolutely Not!

It will, however, require you to be 'intentional' in a wide range of moments that happen throughout virtually every sales presentation. (And we're going to teach you how.)

The good news is, what we share is not complex or hard. The bad news? It can easily be ignored. Think of it this way... every time you see a shopper, a sale will be made. Our only question is... will it be made by you?

MINDSET OF A TRUE CLOSER!

VIEW QUIZ:

Your journey to becoming a better 'closer' begins before you even interact with your next prospect. The best in the business adopt an attitude every day that 'today is the best day' for your customer to commit to one of our Wellness Products.

Why?

Because we know our products improve lives. Also, because we know we offer the best choice in all of our Wellness product categories. We also know our company, with Watkins support, can best support and serve customers as they actually own and use our products.

Finally, the best has a 'today' mindset because they have learned that a hot tub or other wellness product decision is easily put off once the initial interaction ends without a commitment. This can result in the loss of wellness benefits for the customer or even the wrong decision on a competitive product purchased for the wrong reason.

So, to improve your chances of closing... adopt this mindset every day before you even interact with a customer and you will be better motivated to make the most out of every opportunity.

DISCOVERY FOR DECISION MAKING!

Discovery for Decision Making!

Effective decision helping starts with 'purpose-filled' questions.

VIEW QUIZ:

The closing process continues with your initial live interaction with your customer in Discovery. Yes!... even in Discovery as you search for your customers highest needs and their motivations.

You can achieve this by purposefully mixing in strategic questions in Discovery that prompt desire and urgency.

We simply call this Purposeful Discovery.

In other words, you can ask and inter mix these questions with other more broad Discovery questions... as you are in this phase to gauge and qualify if there is any chance of an opportunity to close the sale today and even build desire to move quickly... rather than put it off or 'think about it'.

These questions can include:

- Are you actively shopping right now?
- How soon would you ideally like to have it?
- I assume you heard about our sale?
- If we found the perfect hot tub for you... how soon would you be ready to move forward?
- I assume you would want one before (Summer, Fall, Winter, Spring, Holiday)?
- So, what are you doing right now for that (wellness issue).? (Stress. Discomfort. Back pain. Arthritic pain. Muscle recovery)?

The point is, even in Discovery, with these purposeful Discovery questions we can begin helping the customer with their decision now... vs later.

HOW TO SET YOURSELF UP TO CLOSE THE SALE

How to Set Yourself Up to CLOSE!

As you present - these two critical things can help you Close!

VIEW VIDEO ▶

<https://vimeo.com/1128977694/c6fdcc3ada>

In presentation mode... you can either set yourself up to close the sale or do the opposite. You can set yourself up for the dreaded 'thanks for the information- we will need to think about this'.... even with a hot prospect.

So, to improve you close rate... we suggest a few things.

1. Be intentional about creating the emotional desire for the product by connecting your customer's 'Why' with the incredible experience of owning a product that will improve their quality of life for decades... all while your company stands by to assist in any way possible as they own it.

We suggest as you progress in your presentation that you make clear the Wellness Benefits they will experience with the hot tub they have picked out, and you have presented... benefits they may not have even known about in the hot tub category.

This is far from the 'usual' feature-by-feature presentation that is often used in our business... and that some even in the Watkins Wellness family fall back on.

Make it your mission to build that desire for ownership of that perfect hot tub you have landed on... and you will find your close a lot easier. Ramble on about one feature after another without interaction and emotion and you will hear 'I need to think about it' far too often.

2. When it comes to pricing... be confident about quoting your full (list) price on all items initially... and again make it your mission to show the customer how the hot tub and accessories are worth that full price... instead of rushing to your lowest possible sale price too quickly.

We call this technique "Quote list. Justify list"

Ideally, motivate your customer to want it at full price during presentation, using any incentives or sales or specials you offer as simply another valid reason to move forward right now, instead of later.

VIEW QUIZ:

To increase your chances of closing the sale, we strongly recommend you lean into your Wellness benefit messaging and how that will impact your customers life.

You may have discovered some of your clients Wellness needs in Discovery... but we find it is best to 're-discover' and discuss those needs and our product benefits during presentation.... Most likely as hands are in the water feeling jets, etc.

We suggest you take a 'time out' on any specific feature explanation and help the customer understand how and why a hot tub can improve many facets of their life... both mentally and physically.

You can do this be simply asking...

'Did you know a hot tub can help with that (wellness issue) you are experiencing? Do you know why? Well, what we have learned is... And you will be able to benefit from that every day once you have this... for decades!'

'It is the ultimate feel-better product that you can own and use every day, and it is right outside your back door for the next 20 years'.

SET UP YOUR CLOSE BY QUOTING NUMBERS THE RIGHT WAY

VIEW QUIZ:

You can make your life a lot easier or tougher by how you quote and justify your prices on all your products and accessories.

The best make it a habit... a discipline really... of quoting the list prices on all items and justifying how the product is worth that... long before quoting any specials or discounts.

If you have fallen into the habit of quoting the absolute lowest price right away (and many have)... change that and make it your mission to justify why the product is worth the high number. That is your job... 'to quote list and justify list.'

Then, you can emotionally entice a quicker decision or close via disclosing any specials that you are offering at the right moment to give your customer a reason to buy today.

CLOSE VIA BETTER CHECK-INS

Close via Better 'Check Ins'

How to increase clarity, and boost your confidence to 'Close'

VIEW QUIZ:

When you are presenting, you will increase your chances of closing the sale if you 'close as you go'... using check in questions to see if the customer is liking what is being presented.

These 'check-in' questions are invaluable... but these should be used in a thoughtful and earnest way. In other words, as you check to see if the customer sees the benefit of our Fresh Water salt system for instance, you should be honestly checking to see if they see the benefit... ready to discuss further whatever answer they may give you.

These 'check-in' questions are your opportunity to break from presenting and engage in an honest dialogue with your customer... instead of the typical sales monologue that most encounter in a typical hot tub retail store.

These check in questions come in many forms, such as:

- 'How is all this sounding to you so far?'
- 'Would that have value to you?'
- 'How are we doing so far on this particular hot tub model?'
- 'I know you had some concerns, how did I do answering those?'
- 'What are your thoughts on this seating layout?'
- 'Now that I have shown you how this works and what it does for you... what are your thoughts on our FW Salt System?'
- 'Is this making sense?'
- 'So how comfortable are you with this particular model... the features... and the price?'

These questions can also help the customer engage with you during presentation and make the entire experience fun and inclusive for them... you can help them really feel that their opinion is valued and help you build trust.

Remarkably, these check in questions can be one of your most powerful closing or decision helping techniques as you strive to increase your own closing ability.

CLOSE VIA SWITCHING TO OWNERSHIP MODE

Close via 'Switching to Ownership'

VIEW QUIZ:

One of the bad habits that you will want to avoid if you wish to increase your closing skill, is the habit of over-presenting. This is common and since our products are so feature packed... easy to do. The untrained simply continue to present and present and present until the customer says 'enough'... usually with a request for a card or brochure.

The technique veteran sales pros use is to know how and when to 'stop and switch' to ownership mode.

This occurs when you sense the hot tub you have landed on and presented is 'checking all their boxes' and you purposefully stop presenting... and simply switch to the final things to show or choose or discuss that assumes the customer is now ready to purchase.

This can include discussions about their site, their access for delivery, their color choices, accessory choices etc.

This is an assumptive technique where you move the customer past the decision on the hot tub... and onto the final miscellaneous things to discuss or choose to wrap up the entire purchase.

Make this a habit in your presentation... and you will find your close much easier.

ASKING FOR THE BUSINESS

'Asking' For The Business

It's our responsibility to make this simple for our customer!

<https://vimeo.com/1131045977/33faa7f460>

VIEW QUIZ:

If you are new to sales, and perhaps even if you are not... possibly one of the easiest ways to increase your closing ability is to intentionally ask for the business once you have landed on a hot tub and the customer is liking everything about it.

This technique occurs 'spa side' and usually follows a set up question or statement such as:

- 'It seems like this is checking all your boxes....'
- 'I'm sensing you are comfortable with everything...'

Followed by a simple close such as:

- 'Shall we get one ordered for you?'
- 'Would you like to go ahead with it?'

The fact is, many times the question does not get asked... and the close never occurs... even if a quote is written later. Simply put, some customers just need to be asked... to be put in the drivers' seat of the decision.

It is our job to ask at the appropriate time. Intentionally doing this regularly... if you are not already ... will definitely help you close more sales.

WHEN THEY HESITATE... SIT AND QUOTE

When They Hesitate - 'Sit & Quote'

VIEW VIDEO ▶

<https://vimeo.com/1128977943/370f6f8317>

Sometimes the close occurs 'spa-side' with a simple request for the business. But often it does not, and the customer hesitates and we have to have a strategy for that.

The best have learned that it is not a good idea to press the customer on why they are hesitating right away 'spa-side'... but instead to take a beat and use the hesitation as a reason to sit and get a full quote on the purchase for them to take with them for review.

The transition may sound like this...

"I understand. But since you are considering it let's get you a full quote with all the details so you can leave today with all the specifics... it just takes a minute.' (Then you move to your 'Sit and Quote' area.)

This 'sit and quote' strategy — post customer hesitation — can dramatically increase your chances of closing for many reasons.

First, physiology teaches us that customers who are seated are much more relaxed, focused, and open to discussion when they are seated at the time of a potential decision

Next, via a complete quote process and review of all items priced out and included, you, as a sales pro... have the opportunity to 're-sell' 'clarify' and 'dialogue' with your client and assess if there are any hidden objections or hesitations you can discuss with them.

Often during this moment, if your customer begins to engage with you, they will open up about any reasons for hesitating, and you very well may have the ability to ask for the sale a 2nd or even 3rd time. This may well be the time the customer engages you with questions about financing options or even further price negotiation.

The point is, all of this is great... and if you are intentionally sitting and reviewing the quote, even with a hesitant customer... you are increasing your chances of closing the sale as soon as possible!

QUOTE IT BETTER, CLOSE IT BETTER

Quote it Better - Close it Better

How to write a quote that actually helps you close the sale.

<https://vimeo.com/1128977981/ad8a25e039>

VIEW QUIZ:

The sit and quote process involves more than just printing out a quote for your customer and handing it to them.

Instead, the best have learned that a careful, 'slowed down' walk-through of all the items in the quote with your client is the best strategy.

This involves making sure the customer information is complete and accurate (ensuring lead capture) and the hot tub, accessory pricing is thoroughly discussed and understood, and your client knows exactly what is included, and what is not.

Be careful here. At times sales pros who have been through this process hundreds of times—move too quickly through the quote explanation... even skipping over bits of information. This can cause the client to become confused or uncertain... increasing the hesitancy with deciding on the spot.

So, the best technique is to proceed through your quote deliberately, engaging and having a dialogue with your customer. And as you proceed... welcome discussion... since that is usually a sign that the customer is close to a decision and may just need to be asked again... or given a quiet moment to think... before moving forward with the order.

WHEN THEY HESITATE - HANG IN THERE!

When They Hesitate - Hang In There!

After quoting... they may hesitate. It's our job to slow things down, and just hang in there.

VIEW QUIZ:

When proceeding through the quote process... customers may disclose an objection or concern you have not discussed on the showroom floor.

This is actually a positive sign since it gives you a chance to discuss and possibly solve their concerns right now... vs later. In fact, this is one of the many reasons we encourage this 'sit and quote' process. It can give you more time with the client to just 'Hang in There' as they weigh the decision.

It is important that at this point you do not give up on the sale, nor try to force or push the decision. Instead, a relaxed discussion about whatever is holding your client from moving forward is the best technique.

They may have concerns about:

- The Salt System and what they have heard from competitors
- The overall price of the hot tub
- Their area/deck/patio
- A competitive model they are considering

Regardless of their concern or hesitation... the best technique is to just casually and intentionally 'hang in there' with the client by having an honest and transparent discussion about their concerns... understanding them and discussing solutions or justifications.

The best in this business at closing the sale are very smooth at this stage, and it can be practiced and taught and improved if you just understand the principle... if they hesitate... just hang in there... and your chances of closing the sale will improve dramatically.
